Court rejects spying charges

WASHINGTON - A federal appeals court, saying it was defending national secrets, yesterday dismissed lawsuits by a group of Vietnam war protesters and a New York Times correspondent who said they were victims of illegal government spying. In separate decisions, the US Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia refused to permit the antiwar activists or Harrison Salisbury to sue US intelligence agencies for allegedly gathering secret files on them. The protesters maintained the CIA spied on them as part of the agency's "Operation CHAOS" during the Vietnam war. (UPI)
